volume one – the premiere

This zine is made by a bunch of people who have worked at the IFFR for a few years already, united only by their love of film. Sadly a lot of them are not working again this year and we wanted to explain why, especially since the festival is always shoving it down our throats how important volunteers are.

People are not coming back for a number of different reasons like: We used to get paid! We used to get fed! The music at late night Schouwburg brings me out in a rash! Them useless bosses!

FOOD

Some positions that used to get fed are now supposed to feed themselves, that's quite an ask when people are already giving ten days' of their time. That means that Volunteer Porkchop will not be coming back this year (see image on the next page) >>>

TIPS

What are your tips so far? KFC looks like the weirdest movie.

Manifesto. Bamseom Pirate Seoul Inferno! HAMSTERS!

New from Ulrich Seidl and Takashi Miike will be awesome of course. Johnnie To!! Good to see Kevin Jerome Everson back again. Jarmusch meh. Rekveld yawn (putting the Dutch back in IFFR? Hey it's cheaper right). Nemec who he? No Russian movies whaaaaaat. Bingewatching Atlanta will be fun. Scopitone always rocks (plus it's free!). From the Tigers Demonios tus Ojos looks fun, but of course the Dutch one will win.

Like underground music? Check the double cross party on friday jan27 (central location more details on their facebook page)

GOSSIP

Not much so far, other than an angel getting run over by Russian mafia, but she is thankfully OK.

If we have any time over between working, drinking, eating them delicious sandwiches and watching weird movies then we'll make shitstorm 222. Send your hate to weloverutger@riseup.net.

NO PORKCHOP

It's really great that the old Lantaren Venster (once the peoples house, then a cinema, then ateliers, now KINO) is part of IFFR again. There's nothing quite like racing on the bike down the Binnenweg heading from Cinerama to the next movie on the Gouvernestraat. It certainly beats walking from pathe to schouwburg and nearly wiping out on the frozen metal floor. Over the years the informal boycott on the new Lantaren Venster has been relaxed, it is true, but it's much better to have all the venues close to one another.

But what is going on with KINO generally? We hoped that since it was partfunded by Cineville and joining other Roffa cinemas like Cinerama, Noord, WORM and Lantaren, Kino would go hard arthouse and provide a real alternative viewing experience. Sadly, they seem to be showing a lot of crap, and the plan seems to be to drive Cinerama out of business :{

Check out the table on the next page, you can see that at least on this day Kino is very similar to Cinerama. I say "atleast" since yes it is true that Kino is doing cool oneoffs, like the Omero architect free screening, IFFR showings first Wednesday of the month etc etc BUT overall we don't need another cinema in Rotterdam showing shit like rogue one, courgette, arrival etc etc And on this particular day, of the seven films KINO is showing, five are also shown at Cinerama! That's not really very diverse. You aren't getting much of a choice of what to see in Roffa!

Actually, if you see any films at IFFR then you'll notice pretty quickly that dutch cinemas tend to only screen movies from germany, italy, france, quebec, spain, england, iran and U$A. No russian, no danish, no swedish, no palestinian, no bollywood, nothing from latin america (or hardly any). Bit of a shame huh! I was hoping KINO would do some heavy retrospectives .. Pasolini would be great. They are showing some Terrence Malick films, to be fair, but I wouldn't say that got me so excited.

THE RULES

If you are lucky enough to be at a premiere with our esteemed corporate leader / buddy introducing the movie, drink when the following happens:

- 1. He says “I was a volunteer once”
- 2. He says “IFFR is not like other festivals”
- 3. He says “This festival wouldn't happen without you, the volunteers”
- 4. He plucks an adjective out of the air to describe a film
- 5. He gets down on his knees and gives us an individually tailored paper catalogue suited to our innermost desires
- 6. He breaks down and confesses he can't eat any more sandwiches.
- 7. He introduces the wrong film.
- 8. He doesn't turn up because he is too busy schmoozing.

(all of these things have happened before, except 5 unfortunately) aquarius you have lost your pass, your bike key broke in the lock, now walk back home and deal with your hangover. happy bday!

pisces the fascist pathe people won't let you in to your best friend's premiere because you are 5 minutes late after you saved a cat out of a tree. It is thus becumbent upon you to open up a can of whupass on whomsoever you please GO GO GO aries you spend most of the day looking for a room in the doelen and best thing is you will never find it.

taurus when you read the description of the movie that said it was a touching allegory holding up a mirror to society you should have got out whilst you still could. Now it's too late. Enjoy the five hours!

gemini you miss the film coz you prevaricated too long, sucker!

cancer that boy you kissed yesterday doesn't want to talk to you today. What you thought was love is nothing, NO THING AT ALL

leo yep you got the flu buddy virgo your shitty paper pass gets ripped off and lost :(

libra maybe dumpster diving all that pea soup wasn't the best idea. Your farts will cause cinerama to be evacuated scorpio what a lovely day, watching films, lying on clouds, getting real food vouchers for real food... but hang on, this is a dream, you are dreaming and you are two hours late for your shift
